

Evidence

Millie worked very well with her group while creating the poster. Before starting the activity, she used her laptop confidently to research useful information and saved notes to share with the team. During group work, she respected each member's role and listened carefully to everyone's ideas. When the group needed to make decisions, such as choosing images or deciding how to organise the poster, Millie helped apply simple democratic procedures by voting, sharing suggestions, and accepting the majority's choice. Her positive attitude, cooperation, and responsible use of technology helped the group create an organised and informative poster.
