

Reflexivity Reflection

What the child said

“This place needs to be looked after.”

“If we clean it, it will be better for everyone.”

Teacher observation

During our visit to the nature area, the children demonstrated strong reflexivity by taking the initiative to clean up the space themselves. They showed a clear sense of responsibility for the environment, critically evaluating how the area had been used and misused. The children considered the impact of waste and consumption on sustainability and took deliberate actions to improve the space. By deciding which actions were essential, such as picking up litter, and which were less necessary, they showed thoughtful judgment and eco-awareness. The children reflected on their efforts, discussed the results of their actions, and adjusted their approach as needed to ensure the area was left in a better condition. This activity highlighted their ability to assess, reflect, and act responsibly in caring for the environment.
