The Inventor's Desk

Long ago lived an inventor called Edmund.

Edmund had blue eyes, brown hair and was very intelligent. Edmund had a messy desk filled ^{with} with gears, springs, wires and half-finished contraptions. One time Edmund and his son Peter were making an amazing invention which cost lots of time and effort. Three months later, Edmund and Peter went to Edmund's workshop and realised that ~~th~~ all they had left to do was arrange a screw! So Edmund told Peter that could he could do the last bit. ~~So~~ Peter hopped on the chair and tight~~ened~~^{ed} one last screw and Bam! There it ^b is ^{was} ^{Their} ^{amazing} ~~our invention~~ puppet we made is ready ^{was}

"All we need to do now is rest a bit after all that work," ^{said Edmund,} AS Edmund was sleeping quite deep and snoring heavily, Peter heard a noise and the puppet jumped up from the sofa and, of course, Peter screamed.

The puppet had ^{come} come to life!

It could walk and sort of talk.

So Peter woke Edmund up ^{and} told him everything. Edmund didn't believe him, but when he saw, he was shocked

From that day forward, Peter treated this ^{at} puppet as the brother he ~~never had!~~
